

America Votes NO on the "Cadillac Tax"

2016
ELECTIONS

The "Cadillac Tax" is a 40 percent excise tax on the value of employer sponsored health coverage that exceeds certain benefit thresholds, estimated to be approximately $10,800 for employee-only plans and $29,100 for family plans when the tax takes effect in 2020.

Public Opinion Strategies conducted a nationwide online survey of 1,200 registered voters and found bipartisan opposition to the tax:

The survey found that a vote to repeal the "Cadillac Tax" has a on voters likelihood to vote for their representative.

SEVENTY PERCENT

of survey respondents agreed with this statement:

"The Cadillac Tax should be repealed because it will not bring in the expected $71 billion in new revenue. Employers will drop or reduce health benefits to avoid paying the tax, and proponents are wrong when they assume that employers will raise their workers' taxable wages to make up for these reductions. Congress should start over and find another way to fund the ACA."
